Elizabeth Barrett, “wonderful invention of the day,” 7 December 1843
(keywords: Elizabeth Barrett Browning, Mary Russell Mitford, history of the daguerreotype, history of photography)

THE DAGUERREOTYPE: AN ARCHIVE OF SOURCE TEXTS, GRAPHICS, AND EPHEMERA
The research archive of Gary W. Ewer regarding the history of the daguerreotype http://www.daguerreotypearchive.org
EWER ARCHIVE S8430001

Selected text from:
Manuscript letter by Elizabeth Barrett (Browning) to Mary Russell Mitford, dated 7 December 1843. (Original line breaks preserved. Used with the kind permission of Wellesley College Library, Special Collections.)

Dec. 7, 1843

My dearest Miss Mitford, do you know anything about that wonderful invention of the day, called the Daguerrotypes? — that is, have you seen any portraits produced by means of it? Think of a man sitting down in the sun and leaving his fac simile in all its full completion of outline and shadow, stedfast on a plate, at the end of a minute and a half! — The Mesmeric disembodiment of spirits strikes one as a degree less marvellous. And several of these wonderful portraits . . . like engravings only exquisite and delicate beyond the work of graver — have I seen lately — longing to have such a memorial of every Being dear to me in the world. It is not merely the likeness which is precious in such cases — but the association, and the sense of nearness involved in the thing . . the fact of the very shadow of the person lying there fixed for ever! It is the very sanctification of portraits I think — and it is not at all monstrous in me to say what my brothers cry out against so vehemently . . . that I would rather have such a memorial of one I dearly loved, than the noblest Artist’s work every produced. I do not say so in respect (of disrespect) to Art, but for Love’s sake. Will you understand? — even if you will not agree? —

Ever your affectionate B B
EDITOR’S NOTES:
This letter is indicative of the public’s fascination with the new art of daguerreian portraiture. Barrett remarks about the fineness of the portrait, its near-magical qualities, and especially ascribes a full sentimental value to the possession of such images.

EWER ARCHIVE S8430001
URL: http://www.daguerreotypearchive.org/texts/S8430001_BARRETT_LETTER_1843-12-07.pdf
Document author: Gary W. Ewer
Creation date: 2009-02-10 / Last revision: 2010-12-16
Citation information: manuscript letter by Elizabeth Barrett (Browning) dated 11 April 1843.
Original spelling/punctuation/grammar generally maintained without correction. Any in-text corrections are bracketed.
As noted below, this document is copyright.
If citing directly from this document, please reference the Ewer Archive number and provide the following citation credit:

THE NECESSARY DISCLAIMERS:
The document creator has made every effort to insure the accuracy of the transcription. However, the information provided in this document is provided without warranty, either express or implied. The document creator will not be liable for any damages caused or alleged to be caused directly, indirectly, incidentally, or consequentially by the information provided by this text.
The document creator assumes no responsibility for accuracy of fact; the text is prepared “as found.” Factual inaccuracies of the original text are generally not noted by the document creator. If this text is used in academic papers, accuracy should be confirmed by consulting original sources.
The document creator also assumes no responsibility regarding the correctness, suitability, or safety of any chemical or photographic processes that may be described by this text. Many of the chemicals used in early photographic processes are extremely toxic and should not be handled without a thorough knowledge of safe use.
The opinions expressed in this text are solely those of the original author and are not necessarily those of the Archive editor. Some texts may contain derogatory words. Any such word is certainly one that would not be used today. The words remain in the transcription, however, to maintain truthfulness to the original text.